TRAFFIC BEARING

Severe Storm Has Not Seriously Handicapped Railroads or Telegraph Companies.

SUFFERING AMONG

Charitable Institutions Ask Public to Aid Them in Caring for Destitute People.

No serious interruption to business is anticipated by reason of the belated touch of winter which struck this section early yesterday morning. The city is buried beneath a four-inch blanket of snow, and the State at large experienced a still heavier fall, but all transportation companies report that traffic is holding up well under the handleap, and that no serious delays are expected.

Friday, the 13th, landed with both feet on this city yesterday. It brought with it the worst weather experienced here this winter. Early risers found the streets covered by a thin white blanket, while the thermometer at 7 o'clock had a toehold on the 13 above mark. Snow had begun falling shortly after 5 o'clock, and for thirteen hours it came down in swirling sheets. The mercury, however, began an upward climb, until at 8 o'clock last night it registered 22 degrees above, and the registered 22 degrees above, and the snow had been replaced, first, by a smarting downpour of hall, later by a Fair and Cold Promised.

Weather predictions for to-day are that the snow will probably continue in Southeastern Virginia. If the forecast is correct, telephone and telegraph companies expect many interruptions to their service. The Western Union Tel-egraph and Postal Telegraph Compa-nies last night reported that their wires are holding up well, but that the heavy sleet in South Carolina may impair the service in that direction. Fair and colder is the local forecast.

All railroads report that there has been no interruption to traffic by the snow, and that connections are being made on schedule time. Train crews report that the snowfall along the lines is heavy, but that little or no drifts are being encountered. This condition, however, may be changed by a rising

Street car service in various parts of the city was badly disarranged last night on account of the very slippery condition of the tracks. Many of the cars were unable to crawl the hills. A break in the trolley wire near the bridge on the Highland Park line shortly before midnight interrupted service to that suburb, and quite a number of people caught this side of the break were forced to spend the night in the city.

Wintry Day in Buckingham.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Arvonia, Va., February 12.—Snow commenced falling here before milarnight last night, and has continued without cessation. By 3 o'clock this afternoon it had reached a depth of seven inches. The snow is very fine and light, owing to the extreme cold. Thermometers here registered to-day around 8 and 10 degrees above zero. The wind has been blowing steadily from the northeast with much bitternoss, making the day the most wintry for two years.

Many who did not harvest ice last month had expected to gather their supply on this cold wave, but the snow is expected to interfere with ice harvesting unless the ice can be swept clear. This will be tried in case the ice becomes thick enough to out.

The sharp change in the weather has thrown hundreds of men, women and children upon the mercy of charity, and a continuance of the cold spell will overtax the local institutions.
